The Feast of All Saints, and All Saints' Sunday, November 7

All Saints' Day always falls on November 1. From All Hallows' Eve we get Halloween, October 31, the day before All Saints' Day. On All Saints' Day, we celebrate all the holy saints of God, known and unknown. Because the well-known saints are on our church calendar, and they have feast days of their own, All Saints' Day is especially for those who otherwise would go uncelebrated, those anonymous, silent, humble, holy people of God living in our midst who are the very salt of the earth. So that we may celebrate All Saints' Day with the greatest number of people, we celebrate it on the Sunday following All Saints' Day, which this year falls on November 7.

This Sunday, we are remembering our friends and loved ones who have died in the past year in the prayers of the people, and we reaffirm our hope that one day we will be reunited with them in the Communion of Saints.

Father Joe

The Communion of Saints

As we approach All Saints' Day, I always think of that part of the Apostles' Creed at the end (Book of Common Prayer, p. 96) where we state our belief in "...the Holy Spirit, the holy catholic Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, and the resurrection of the dead (my italics)." Because of the gift of the Holy Spirit, who was given to the followers of Christ after the resurrection and ascension of Jesus, the "holy catholic Church" came to life. All of those who follow Christ and are baptized into his death and resurrection are made into one body and are preserved in a unity with one another and with God by the operation of the Holy Spirit. As living members of Christ, the Church has been made into a "communion of saints," a unity throughout all time and space of those who belong to Christ. We are given by God's grace "the forgiveness of sins," and we live in hope of "the resurrection of the body," which Jesus himself first experienced on Easter. So whereas almost all the great celebrations of the Church year are feasts relating to the life and work of our Lord, Jesus Christ, All Saints' Day celebrates the new life we have in Christ with one another as a result of the death and resurrection of Jesus, the gift of the Holy Spirit, and our baptism into the body of Christ. We call this new life in Christ the Communion of Saints.

Giving to Grace Church
